DETAILED ACTION

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 5, 7 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Zaengerle (4913604) in view of Miller (Re. 21068), David et al. 4946318 and WO 2004062839.

Zaengerle (4913604) lacks the disclosure of serrations arranged on one of its main surfaces and extending parallel to its toothed edge.

Miller discloses a slot milling cutter, which comprises insert seats provided with first serrations and cutting inserts provided with second serrations which are arranged on at least one main surface of the cutting inserts; where the first and second serrations extend in the axial direction of the slot milling cutter.

It would have been obvious to a skilled artisan to provide the insert of Zaengerle with the serrations of Miller to insure a firmer connection between the elements.

Zaengerle lacks the disclosure of serrated surfaces on both sides of the main surfaces. WO 2004062839 discloses such an arrangement comprising serrations (40, 60). It would have been obvious to a skilled artisan at the time of the invention to provide Zaengerle with serrations on both sides in the manner as taught by WO 2004062839 in order to improve the rigidity of the insert when connected to a cutting head. With respect to claim 8, Zaengerle lacks the disclosure of two opposed toothed edge sides. David et al discloses such an arrangement. It would have been obvious to a skilled artisan to provide Zaengerle with two opposed toothed edges in the manner as taught by David et al. in order to provide an indexing capability to the tool when the edges are worn.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claim 1-4 and 9-14 are allowable.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 11/17/09 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that claim 5 recites "wherein the cutting insert has serrations on both the main surfaces thereof" and "the serrations extend parallel to the toothed edge side of the cutting insert." And that none of the cited references disclose at least this combination of elements.

The examiner submits that all of the elements claimed by applicant are clearly found in the prior art (as shown by the cited references). And to combine these references to produce the claimed subject matter would have been well within the level of one skilled in the art.

Further, the examiner submits that the rationale to modify or combine the prior art does not have to be expressly stated in the prior art; the rationale may be expressly or impliedly contained in the prior art or it may be reasoned from knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art, established scientific principles, or legal precedent established by prior case law. In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988).

Hence, since all the claimed elements were known in the prior art and one skilled in the art could have combined the elements as claimed and use them in an off the shelf manner known to those in the industry with no change in their respective functions, such that the claimed elements would perform their known functions and the combination of elements would have yielded nothing more than predictable results to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention.

Further, in response to applicant's inference that the examiner has combined an excessive number of references; the examiner submits that reliance on a large number of references in a rejection does not, without more, weigh against the obviousness of the claimed invention. See In re Gorman, 933 F.2d 982, 18 USPQ2d 1885 (Fed. Cir. 1991).

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
